I don't think I am supposed to divulge the details and so I will decline to do so. In any event, one never knows whether questions will arise which could delay things. That too is not a prediction, just a cautionary note. Having said all this, it is not a long "extension."

is there some stated length to the self-granted extension of the "approving official"?

The approving official was granted an "extension" from today, which had been the requested date (and the basis for my non-prediction prediction in the email below). This is not, to my knowledge, based on any substantive issue. I know that he is aware of this case and I know that it will be reviewed, probably in the very near future. Beyond that, I now think there is little point to my opining on matters that I obviously have no control over. My previous efforts have been an embarrassment to me and of no value to you. Peter

It is my hope that we will hear early next week. Usual caveats apply. Peter
